

OpenWorld Forum Demo Cup 2010 award for XWiki

On Friday, October 1, XWiki made a demo of its solution as a finalist of the Demo Cup. It is one of the lucky winners!

Paris (France), October 1st, 2010

The Demo Cup is an opportunity to show innovative and promising open source solutions, selected very strictly. We are proud to announce that XWiki received one of five awards, given by the jury composed of international experts from the field of open source. It rewards the work and commitment of a team and a community.

The other winners are Bluegriffon, Obeo, Jaspersoft and Talend.

About the Demo Cup: <http://www.openworldforum.org/connect/awards>

About XWiki

XWiki is a young company created in 2004 that provides services around its professional open source collaboration solution (licence LGPL), XWiki Enterprise, based on a second-generation wiki. This solution is designed to help organizations and communities to organize information simply and to share it effectively. Recently, XWiki was candidate of the French call for projects "Innovating Web" with the project Wiki 3.0 and is also one of the 10 successful French enterprises in open source (L'Informaticien, n° 68). XWiki has today over 100 customer references, and thousands of business users in France and worldwide.

For more informations, please contact Emilie Ogez by mail at Emilie.Ogez@xwiki.com or visit the web site <http://www.xwiki.com>